Interference layers in energetically balanced projects

1. Introduction

This article deals with the topic of interference layers in energetically balanced projects.

During my ECOintention vocational training and afterwards I came into contact with interference layers in various ways. The first time was in the third year of the vocational training, when I balanced a company, owned by my son and two others. Together they were managing partners as well. This experience made a big impression on me. During the initial scan we detected an interference layer and during the energy balancing trajectory my son was maneuvered out of the company by the other two owners. I wish I knew more about interference layers back then, since interference layers have significant predictive properties.

Partially for this reason, I would like to sharpen and elaborate the description of interference layers on the various existing levels, enucleate their influence on daily reality and their predictive value. Interference layers in projects, and their predictive value, fascinate me to an increasing extent. Also the origin of those layers – inside or outside the project – also appears to be significant, especially in relation to the guardian(s) of the project. I noticed that the current definitions used in the vocational training are not sufficient for me.

In order to come to this elaborated description, I will utilize the concept of chakras. I also will describe projects where disturbance layers have occurred from my practice as ECOintention Practitioner.

2. Brief introduction to the context of ECOintention and energy fields

Already during my childhood I learned there is more than just what you can perceive with the usual five senses (ears, eyes, nose, mouth [taste buds] and skin). I sometimes foreshadowed things and only realized later that I am apparently able to perceive in a different way. I understood there really is more than what we perceive with our usual senses. It was only in 2014 that I came into contact with the ECOintention method and with the concept of energy fields that appear to contain energy and information, the so called morphic fields.

It is important to know that everything is connected and is not bound to place or time. It is also important to realize that we can perceive energy fields or volumes, that they contain information in addition to energy, and that they are influenceable. The latter already happens when someone perceives such a field. The ECOintention method works with those morphic fields, who influence the emergence of reality. In other words: energy directs/influences reality (the mind moves the matter).

Hans Andeweg also states that everything is connected and that 'life energy plus information gives formative force' and that 'formative force plus matter gives life form'.

The ECOintention method distinguishes in every balancing project three different levels.

- Concept level: the level of the plans, head;

- Realization level: closest to the material (shop floor, implementation, doing), feet;
- Middle level: the level of interaction between concept, realization and interacts with the project environment and exchange of information and communication, heart;

In all those levels, different energetic parameters are valued in an absolute sense or in a ratio.

3. Explanation of the phenomenon of interference layers

Interference layers can be distinguished above the holon of a balancing project. They can appear in every of the three described levels. In an interference layer, the same energetic parameters can be observed as in the zero layer of the concept, realization and middle level. The interference layer, as it were, is part of a third dimension to the flat surface of the holon. By determining the disturbance layer and by assigning it a coordinate, the layer is framed and it can then be healed (balanced).

4. Elaboration of the relationship between interference layers and the chakras

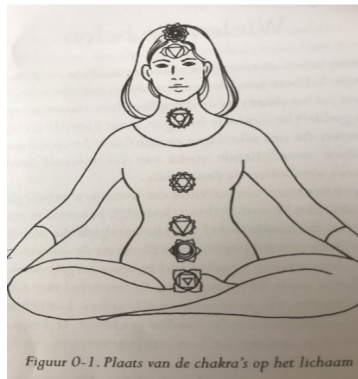

Every interference layer has a cause or origin, which can come from inside or outside the project. When it originates from within we give it a – (minus) coordinate, when it comes from outside we indicate a + (plus) coordinate. Our observations show that interference layers can appear at seven different strata within every level of a project. So, in theory there are 42 (7 x 3 x 2) different interference layers possible. The way they impact a project can best be understood according to the concept of the seven chakras. Each chakra is connected with certain attributes and life areas. It is important to realize that every project is delimited by the objectives that are set by the guardian(s). A possible interference layer therefore has a specific disruptive effect on achieving the objectives, conform the attributes and areas of the chakra that corresponds with it.

In practice, interference layers on the first four levels appear to have a relevant influence on the project. The higher the chakra level is, the higher it manifests from the holon and has less influence.

After studying various books¹ on chakras and the psyche in relation to the chakras, I arrive at the following definitions, derived from those various books and experiences with disruptive projects:

5. Definition and nuance of internal (-) and external (+) interference layers

It is important to determine whether the cause or origin of an interference layer comes from within the project or from outside. This makes it possible to determine with what it resonates in daily reality. When the cause originates from outside, it resonates within the project at the same stratus. And vice versa: an interference layer within the project resonates at its specific stratus with the outside world.

Example 1

In a project with an organic farmer in Germany with a mixed farm we determined an interference layer at the coordinate +3. This indicates: the cause lies outside and the content resonates with will, decisiveness/action and power.

It turned out that the farmer wanted to cultivate his land in a way that was not (yet) allowed by the law. Here the law, as external factor, caused the interference layer because the farmer wanted something and got frustrated by the legal restriction.

Ultimately, the problem was solved when the farmer was able to make legal agreements with the municipality. This solution became available when the interference layer was nearly dissolved, which means: had the same value as the zero layer (Rijk Bols).

In example 1 the interference layer was detected as originating from outside while the farmer (from inside) wanted something. In other words, it is good to look at both the inside and the outside of the project in the event of an interference layer. Where such a layer is most observable or most dominant, we determine the origin.

6. Behavior, elaboration and possible predictive value of interference layers

It seems that an interference layer can arise any time. They can be perceived at the initial scan of a project, during the balancing phase, or in the subsequent phases³. In my experience interference layers are easier to observe and interpret when the project has passed the balancing phase and the energetic values are at target level. During the balancing phase, the interference layer moves along with the development of the project. It develops faster than the energetic values of the corresponding zero layer, and dissolves when the values of this zero layer are matching.

An interference layer can sometimes develop very quickly. It can even disappear after a few weeks. I sometimes have observed this after 3 testing days, which is a period of about 30 to 35 days). The chakra indication and description helps with the interpretation of the interference layer. This often provides sufficient clues for the guardian of a project to understand the impact of the interference layer on everyday reality. In addition, also feeling the layer and naming what you observe can help.

Example 2

In the project Refugee Shelter Lesbos, an interference layer with the coordinate -4 arose at realization level. It originated from the inside of the project. 4 corresponds with the heart level and the area of connection. The guardians of the project immediately understood the cause.

A few days earlier had been ordered that the refugees housed in the Kara Tepe camp had to move to the new refugee camp near the sea. That move proceeded with military precision and great impersonality.

³ According to a number of interviews with ECOintention practitioners and supervisor Rijk Bols

Example 3

In a school project, an interference layer at the realization level was discovered just before a new school year started. This layer manifested at -3 with the characteristics of anger, will and hostility. The guardians immediately recognized the cause in reality. It turned out that one of the teachers did not keep to agreements and confronting him led to an argument.

There seemed to be two possible solutions: either the teacher would remain on the job, or he would have to look for another job. Within a few days there had been talks, the teacher came around and the quarrel in the team de-escalated.

This interference layer disappeared after three test periods.

6. Possible remedies to solve interference layers within the context of ECOintention.

As far as I have been able to verify, the specific balancing of an interference layer doesn't happen often. Usually the interference layer pulls away due to the balancing of the zero layer. The remedy is partly dependent on the values of the interference layer. Raising the BOVIS with a transformer causes the POA to rise as well. When the POA has to increase, we use an informant and an energizer, but it does not increase the BOVIS

If the corresponding zero layer is not yet at target values, the choice of the balancing remedy is generally motivated by helping the zero layer develop towards the target values and not specifically by balancing the interference layer.

When the interference layer is at a high chakra level and the zero level values are at target, then you should intervene/balance on the interference layer. Be then disregarded because of the minor influence of the interference layer on the project. In other words: it remains sensible to use the balancing remedy for the entire project.
